

Photo Of The Day: A Juicy Tradition

Published on Food Manufacturing (<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com>)

Photo Of The Day: A Juicy Tradition

(Newswise) — A taste for apples, a September 1978 issue of Popular Mechanics and a bumper crop of fruit combined to create what has become a tradition for two Brookings, S.D., families and their friends.

Slicing through the center of each apple is important, because worms sometimes enter the blossom end, leaving no telltale signs on the outside of the apple. The worm tracks and blemishes must be cut out of the apples before they can be turned into cider. (Photo: Newswise)

Source URL (retrieved on 01/29/2015 - 7:41am):

<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com/news/2012/11/photo-day-juicy-tradition>