

Beef Jerky Recalled for Safety Concerns

Published on Food Manufacturing (<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com>)

Beef Jerky Recalled for Safety Concerns

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — Health officials have issued another recall for a food product processed by a Northern California slaughterhouse.

The Monterey County Health Department said in a statement on Monday that it was recalling Krave Jerky's garlic chili pepper beef jerky processed at Rancho Feeding Corporation in Petaluma, Calif.

The agency said it was recalling the 3.25-ounce jerky product because of safety concerns. The product was distributed nationwide and will bear the mark "EST 18951."

Rancho Feeding Corporation halted operations last month after a series of recalls [1], including one on Feb. 10 for 8.7 million pounds of beef that had been processed from diseased animals without a complete inspection.

Health officials have not received any reports of illness caused by the products.

Source URL (retrieved on 01/25/2015 - 9:44pm):

<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com/news/2014/03/beef-jerky-recalled-safety-concerns>

Links:

[1] <http://www.foodmanufacturing.com/news/2014/02/fed-launch-criminal-probe-calif-slaughterhouse>