

Police Seek Man in Fudge Bar Smackdown

Published on Food Manufacturing (<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com>)

Police Seek Man in Fudge Bar Smackdown

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) - Authorities in South Carolina say a man who was not in good humor smacked an ice-cream truck driver with a fudge bar in a dispute over correct change after his daughter bought the frozen confection.

The ice cream vendor told Rock Hill, South Carolina, police the man accused her of not giving his daughter correct change after a purchase. That's when the fudge bar was allegedly employed as a weapon.

Police officers who responded to the call Wednesday reported they saw a red mark on the driver's arm.

The driver gave officers a description of the man and the white truck he used for a getaway vehicle. The police report did not say whether he took the fudge bar with him.

Source URL (retrieved on 03/06/2015 - 8:11pm):

<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com/news/2014/05/police-seek-man-fudge-bar-smackdown>