

Kellogg Co. Closes the Door on Georgia Plant

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — A food manufacturing company has announced plans to close a plant in western Georgia by the end of next year.

Kellogg Co. officials announced Monday that they're closing a plant in Columbus as part of a restructuring process. The move is expected to eliminate 325 jobs.

Kellogg Co. spokesman Kris Charles said in a statement that the move is part of the company's four-year efficiency and effectiveness program.

Charles says the move will help the company cut costs that can be shifted to investments in strategy and business growth.

Source URL (retrieved on 01/31/2015 - 8:26am):

<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com/news/2014/07/kellogg-co-closes-door-georgia-plant>