

World Cup: Patriotic Waffle House Won't Serve Belgian Waffles

The Associated Press

SALVADOR, Brazil (AP) — Waffle House doesn't serve Belgian waffles and certainly won't start now.

The Georgia-based restaurant chain took to its Twitter account Monday to proclaim, "We don't believe in Belgium waffles." Or Belgian waffles, as a follower quickly corrected. But the sentiment, a riff on American fans' "I believe that we will win" chant, was popular a day before the U.S. faces Belgium in the World Cup.

Restaurant spokeswoman Meghan Irwin says it's all in good fun. Earlier, when a follower asked for the restaurant's opinion on Belgian waffles, it tweeted: "We dominate them."

Waffle House serves American-style waffles. Belgian waffles are bigger with a lighter batter.

In Belgium, waffles have been a part of the diet for centuries. But so-called Belgian waffles aren't really served in that country. There are Brussels waffles and Liege waffles.

Source URL (retrieved on 01/29/2015 - 3:59pm):

<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com/news/2014/07/world-cup-patriotic-waffle-house-wont-serve-belgian-waffles>