

VIDEO: Food Dye Possibly Linked to ADHD

Published on Food Manufacturing (<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com>)

VIDEO: Food Dye Possibly Linked to ADHD

Shannon Miller, CNN Newswire

Modern medicine doesn't know what causes attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, or commonly known as ADHD, but some studies say artificial food coloring plays a role. These colors are found in everything from candy and cereal to mouthwash and marshmallows. Now, a new study from Purdue University is shedding light on the possible connection.

Source URL (retrieved on 01/25/2015 - 10:21am):

<http://www.foodmanufacturing.com/videos/2014/06/video-food-dye-possibly-linked-adhd>